THE OBSERVATOR.

Examiner's Assertion of the ill Treatment of the Clergy for several Years past, consider'd. His Reflections on the Dissenters, for concurring with the late King James's Dispensing Power, examin'd and retorted. Instances of the Addresses, and other Proceedings of his Party, in favour of the Dispensing Power. His Account, and that of the Rehearser, as to the Concurrence of the Clergy in the late Happy Revolution, compar'd.

From Saturday, January 6. to Wednesday, January 10. 1711.

Countrym. LET's talk a little about the Examiner of the 28th past, Master: He complains terribly 'of the 'ill Treatment of the Clergy for 'al Years past by those from whom they de'rv'd much better quarter, and in whose power 'had chiefly put it to use them so ill.'

Never was there a Party more unhappy in Advocate, Roger, than the Examiner's Party is him; for he is not only continually uttering Falshoods, but such gross ones as every body is to discover. We have had the solemn Declaration of the Queen, both Houses of Parliament, and of the Upper House of Convocation, that the Church of England was in a flourishing Condition and in no danger. Her Majesty, as he styles himself, began her Reign with a noble Benefaction to the Church, and yet he persists obstinately in the Slander. I am forc'd to repeat these things, Roger, because he always repeats the Untruths, and acts as if he had been bred up in the Maxims and Morals of the Jesuits; one of which is, To calumniate boldly, that something may stick.

Countrym. He says, 'That the bold and brave Defences made before the Revolution against many Invasions of our Rights, proceeded principally from the Clergy.'

Obs. That there were very good Patriots among the Clergy in those days, is what no body denies, but that the bold and brave Defences of Rights proceeded principally from them, is a groundless Assertion, that none but one of the Examiner's Front would advance it. Every body knows how too many of the Bishops and Superiour Clergy behav'd themselves in the time of the Popish Plot, and while the Exclusion of the Duke of York was on foot. 'Twas they gave the fatal Turn in favour of the Court against that Duke: 'twas they who sounded a false Alarm thro' the Nation of a Whig or Republican Plot, as they call'd it, on purpose to drown the Noise of the Popish Plot. 'Twas they who promoted Addresses of Abhorrence against our Parliaments, who shew'd a great disposition to inquire into the Treachery of the Papists. The Clergy did so generally give into those Arbitrary Measures, under the Guide L'Estrange, that he made his boasts of them in his Observators, and was rewarded for his Pains by Contributions from the Universities and Clergy of his own stamp; while he run down those now call'd Low-Churchmen, as a parcel of Fanatick Schismaticks and Traitors; in the same manner as that Worthy Part of the Church of England is now treated by the Examiner, and other Libellers of the Faction.

Countrym. I remember, Master, that in those days when the Westminster and Oxford Parliaments were inquiring into the Popish Plots, the most part of the Clergy run with open mouth upon 'em; and that when the Dispensing Power was set on foot in the late King James's Reign, there was a Book then publish'd by Authority in defence of it, call'd Vox Cleri pro Rege, or the Voice of the Clergy for the King; and that the Authority of the Judges and Universities were also made use of to support that Doctrine.

Obs. 'Tis very true, Roger, and their Guide L'Estrange spent many of his last Observators upon the Subject, wherein he asserted the Dispensing Power with all his might. The late King James erected an Ecclesiastical Commission by virtue of this Power, the Members of which were the then Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor Jefferies, the Earl of Rochester, the late Earl of Sunderland, the Bishop of Durham, the Bishop of Rochester, and the Lord Chief Justice Herbert: but the Archbishop refusing to act, the Bishop of Chester was put in his stead. Now I hope the Examiner will not say that any of those who did act in it were Whigs or Dissenters, or that it was more criminal in the latter to receive Favours from this Dispensing Power, than 'twas in Churchmen to act by it. Not that I would approve all the Addresses of the Dissenters on that Head; but this I will venture to say, that any Man who casts his eye upon the Addresses of those times, will find those from profess'd Sons of the Church of England both more numerous and fulsom than any presented by the Dissenters. Those of the Presbyterians, Independents, and Anabaptists, were so far from countenancing the Dispensing Power, that they express their Desire of the Concurrence of Parliament; which, had they believ'd the Dispensing Power, was altogether needless. But supposing they had, was it more criminal in them, or were they oblig'd to know the Law better in that case than the Judges and Universities, who asserted it, till it came to be made use of against themselves? Did not the Benchers and Barristers of the Middle-Temple, one of our most famous Colleges of Lawyers, tho all of 'em Churchmen, own the King's Declaration to be according to the Prerogative, and thank him for asserting it, in their Address publish'd in the Gazette of June 13. 1687? Did not the Bishop, Dean and Chapter of Durham, and the rest of the Clergy of that Diocese, thank the King for his Declaration, by their Address in the Gazette of May 19. 1687? The City of Durham did the like, in the Gazette of the 30th of May; and their Address was presented by their Bishop. In that same Gazette we have the like Address from the Bishop, Chapter, and Clergy of the Diocese of Chester. The Bishop, Chapter, and Clergy of the Diocese of Lincoln did the same, in the Gazette of July 4. The Dean and Chapter of Ripon in that of the 7th: The Bishop, Chapter, and Clergy of Coventry and Litchfield in that that of the 11th: The Biſhop, Chapter and Clergy of St. Davids, in that of Octob. 6. The Gentlemen of the Inner-Temple, in the Gazette of January 6. following; and the Clergy of the County Palatine of Cheſter, by them publiſh'd in the Gazette of Aug. 20. 1688. reflect upon thoſe of their Brethren who would not read the Declaration, and pray his Majeſty not to impute it to the Church of England. 'Twould be endleſs, Roger, to mention the Addreſſes of this ſort from Church-of-England-Men in all the Corporations, and from all the Grand Juries in England; ſo that the Examiner ſhould not have touch'd upon this Subject, had he conſulted the Honour of his Highflying Party.

Then as to fulſom Expreſſions in Addreſſes, there can be nothing more rank than thoſe of the Corporation of Kingſton upon Hull, in the Gazette of Nov. 10. 1687. wherein 'they thank his Ma-'jeſty for his Declaration of Indulgence, and his 'Aſſurance to maintain the Church of England; 'and tell him, they ſhould ſin againſt God and 'his Vicegerent, ſhould they queſtion or fear the 'Enjoyment or Performance of what hath been ſo 'often promis'd by KING JAMES THE 'JUST.'

That from Carliſle, in the Gazette of May 21. 1688. deſerves the next place; for there they not only thank him for his Declaration, but FOR HIS ARMY; which, they tell him, was both the Honour and Safety of the Nation, let the Teckelites think and ſay what they will. I am much miſtaken if the Examiner can find any ſuch thing in the Diſſenters Addreſſes.

Beſides, Roger, moſt of the Grand Juries and Corporations in England, tho they profeſs'd themſelves to be of the Church, did promiſe to chuſe ſuch Men as would repeal the penal Laws and Teſt; and among others that of Tewksbury, introduc'd by the late Duke of Beaufort, March 1. 1687. and I believe no body ever underſtood his Grace to be a Whig.

'Tis likewiſe obſervable, that many of thoſe Church-of-England Addreſſes took notice of the great Benefit that accru'd to Trade, by the Liberty of Conſcience granted to Diſſenters; and that inſtead of forcing People out of the Country, as the Execution of the penal Laws had done, 'twou'd incourage Foreigners to come and live among us: which is quite contrary to the modern Politicks of the Examiner and his Party, who reproach thoſe that gave Incouragement to the poor Palatines, ſo many of whom are now, to the Scandal of the Nation, begging and ſtarving in our Streets.

I don't, by any thing here ſaid, argue the leaſt in favour of the Diſpenſing Power, or the Repeal of the Teſt againſt Papiſts; but mention them only to let the Examiner ſee what ſort of an Advocate he is, to touch upon things that lay his own Party ſo open to Recrimination: yet they were not to blame for obſerving the benefit of Liberty of Conſcience, had it been legally given; for that the Trade and Peace of the Nation ſuffer'd extremely by the want of it, is evident from the Addreſſes of moſt of the Trading Towns in England, and from thoſe of the ſeveral Corporations in London. A remarkable Inſtance to prove this is the Addreſs of the Quakers, at their General Meeting in London, in the Gazette of the 26th of May, 1687. wherein they repreſent, That above Twelve Hundred of their Denomination were reliev'd from Priſon in England and Wales, beſides many others from the Spoil and Ruin of their Eſtates and Properties. And in their Addreſs of the 11th of June, 1688. they take notice th the Anger of the offended Clergy, ſome of had been impriſon'd till Death. Had the D ters of other Denominations been as carefu take Liſts of their impriſon'd Friends, and to an Account of the Spoil committed on their Eſt 'twould have been enough to fill one's Mind Horror at the Proceedings of thoſe times, a put the Nation for ever out of love with thoſ nal Laws, which our Sacheverellites are ſo eag have reviv'd, that they might not only ſend ſenters to Jail, but to Hell by Wholeſale, as as their Anathema's could effect it.

Countrym. I think, Maſter, the Examiner as good, have let his Reflections upon the D ters falling in with the Diſpenſing Power a for any thing he has got by it. I am glad how to find, that he ſays, the Body of the C join'd heartily in the Common Cauſe at the R lution, and heartily wiſh all of them had ſtill tinu'd to do ſo. But how will he reconcile with what Leſley, his Brother-Advocate, ſa the Preface to his Pontificate and Regale, pa againſt Dr. A.? The Doctor ſaid, That nom been more inſtrumental than the Clergy in prom the common Deliverance. To which Leſley re 'If he mean thoſe who choſe to comply and 'mit rather than ſuffer, their Numbers are in 'great; but as for thoſe who had a hand i 'promoting, contriving and bringing abou 'Revolution, there are not, I believe, ſo ma 'half a dozen of the Clergy who have the 'nour to be ſuſpected in it, or who were i 'ted in the Secret. For not to reckon upo 'Archbiſhop, and eight other Biſhops with 'who were near the half of the then Biſho 'the Kingdom, and betwixt three and 'hundred of the inferiour benefic'd Clergy 'ſides many others who are not known who 'ſtood their Ground; this appears yet mo 'that Reluctancy which many, and the moſt 'nent of thoſe who comply'd, did expreſs in 'ſwallowing the Oaths, with Declarations h 'and lower, ſome ſticking out to the laſt 'and ſome even after.'

Obſ. Let the Examiner ſee how to reconci Account to that of his Brother Leſley, Roger none of our Buſineſs: But every body ſees Leſley triumphs upon ſome late Events in his Old Cauſe, as if he was in the right, and D in the wrong; and how much he boaſts of hi deavours in reviving the old abdicated Prin every one knows. This, one wou'd think, teach the Examiner a little more Calmneſs, an a ſtop to his Deſign of fomenting our Divi but ſince it does not, we have too much Ca ſuſpect, that tho he pretends to diſapprove th hearſal's Methods, he is retain'd in the ſam tereſt; for he ſerves it as effectually, if not than ever the Rehearſer did. But enough of things at preſent, Roger.
